

Peer Review Sheet

The goals of the peer review are to critically evaluate the quality of a given manuscript, highlight its strengths and weaknesses, indicate how it could be improved and help the Editorial Team of CEJISS make decision.

Hence, a good review should:

- be critical and to the point;
- be constructive and encouraging;
- be adequately detailed;
- provide clear suggestions;
- follow the perspective deployed by the Author(s). Please try to minimise this type of thinking: “If I wrote the paper, I would employ a different perspective.”

Basic requirements of CEJISS on manuscripts

- Research goal explicitly defined
- Relationship vis-à-vis the existing literature on a given topic clearly articulated (a separate literature review section is not necessary, but it should be clear how the paper builds on the existing literature)
- Theoretical, conceptual, or methodological framework/approach explained
- The main argument and/or key conclusions explicitly stated

CEJISS accepts a wide range of contributions without favouring any particular theoretical or methodological tradition. It welcomes the following types of manuscripts:

- Analytical papers guided by a theoretical and/or methodological framework;
- Papers aspiring to make policy contribution (However, they need to satisfy academic criteria. In other words, they need to be academic/research articles in the first place.);
- Explorative papers if it is evident in which way they are innovative;
- Sophisticated synthetic and overview papers with added value and a recognisable degree of novelty.
